APRIL 2012

Bayard Rustin Honored

On March 15 at Fifteenth Street Meetinghouse the American Friends Service Committee, Fifteenth Street Meeting, Friends Seminary, and City Lights sponsored a celebration of the life of Bayard Rustin entitled “A Faithful Life.” Rustin was an influential leader within the Peace and Civil Rights movement for many years, and also a Friend.

The celebration began with refreshments and music, and then several speakers shared their views of Bayard Rustin both as a person and as an organizer and inspirational leader. Among those who did so was Michael Lang, editor of the recently-released book “I Must Resist: Bayard Rustin, A Life in Letters.” Also speaking was Daniel Seeger, the long time director of the American Friends Service Committee and a member of Fifteenth Street Meeting.

The occasion lifted our spirits in a time when Quakers, and the country as a whole, are looking for the kind of inspiration and guidance that Bayard gave so freely.

Ministry & Counsel Committee Launches “Friendly 8’s”

In order to bring together members and attenders young and old in Brooklyn Meeting, Ministry and Counsel is putting together a series of potluck dinners throughout Brooklyn. The dinners, which begin on April 15, feature volunteer hosts who contact guests from a sign-up list and set a date. The guests bring food, and all participate in the ensuing conversations. Sign-up sheets are available after Meeting for Worship, in the Social Room

One of the primary areas of conversational focus at the dinners will be about what has brought the guests to Quakerism. The idea is to have a good distribution of ages, attenders and members at each dinner, reflective of the Meeting itself. Through the years Brooklyn Meeting Friends have participated in gatherings like these to create a connected community, and now that the Meeting has become larger it is even more important.

It’s Quaker Business

Three Clerks Tell Their Stories

On the First Day afternoon of March 18, three clerks shared their experiences with the unique business process of Friends and made practical suggestions based on what they have learned.

Nancy Black, Clerk of New York Quarterly Meeting for the past five years, described Quaker business practice as seeking divine will within a group. It differs from consensus because the main purpose is to seek divine guidance together while considering an issue. The Clerk can use periods of silence throughout the meeting in order to maintain a worshipful center. Participating Friends focus on what is best for the group, not just on what they think. The Clerk provides an agenda, remains neutral, keeps the group focused, and suggests a minute if unity develops. The silence of members indicates consent. She pointed out that clarity and correct information are necessary. If a Friend is inappropriate, other Friends or the Clerk can stand silently. Ministry and Counsel can provide a member to sit with an individual who has difficulty with the discipline.

Barbara von Salis shared her experiences with young Friends in the New York Yearly Meeting and Friends General Conference. She spoke of “firm love” in clerking these groups, as well as the need to guide and channel the energy of participants. She also described the use of modern technology in bringing Friends together across distances, such as video-enabled conference calls in which participants can see as well as hear one another.

Benjamin Warnke described clerking in several different situations, including American Friends Service Committee, Brooklyn Friends School Committee, and the Quarterly Meeting Property Task Group. He emphasized the importance of the relationship between the Recording Clerk and the Clerk in developing minutes. He pointed out that the worship in a meeting for business is often not visible, even when it is present. He commented on the challenge of being “mindful of the time” while giving everyone a chance to speak on every issue. Items can be held over until the next meeting if they are taking too long.

After the presentations, more questions were raised (many of them practical) and suggestions were made. There was agreement that non-Quakers should be helped to participate, that participants can be limited to one message on a topic, that one or a few people opposed to what seems to be the sense of the meeting can be asked to stand aside, and, finally, that the Clerk can use silence to bring the meeting back to the center. It was emphasized that clerks should seek support from a small group or a trusted individual in all aspects of clerking on a regular basis.

Approximately thirty Friends participated in this workshop.
