Meeting for Business Welcomes New Clerks

Ted Ehrhardt and Nancy Black clerked their first Meeting for Business on First Day, January 5. They explained that they will be working together as partners, dividing the tasks of clerking. Shared clerking is a good example for committees that may be having difficulty finding a single clerk to undertake the responsibilities of clerking alone.

Brooklyn Meeting's "State of the Meeting Report" Approved

A revised draft of the 2014 State of the Meeting Report was read and approved. It will be sent to New York Yearly Meeting. The report dealt with the influx of new attenders and visitors to Meeting for Worship and suggested that older members sitting near them introduce themselves and be available to welcome them and answer questions.

The report also described educational activities in the Meeting, the formation of a teen group in the First Day School, adult programs, worship sharing, and the consideration of Sacred Texts and Quakerism 101 that takes place once a month after Social Hour.

Audit Committee Reports

Brooklyn Meeting financial records and practices are in good order, according to the annual report of the Audit Committee.

Friends expressed appreciation for the work of this committees.

Birthright Friend Joins Meeting

North Lenox, from a Quaker family over six generations, was welcomed into Brooklyn Meeting. A graduate of Westtown Friends School, Lenox expressed his long commitment to Friends testimonies.

Brooklyn Meeting Loses Two Friends

The Clerk announced that Pauli Adams and Llewellyn Boyce died during the past month. Memorial Meetings were planned for both.

School Faculty and Staff Appreciation Dinner Scheduled

The Joint Care Subcommittee for Brooklyn Friends School and Mary McDowell Friends School announced that the annual dinner will take place in the Meetinghouse on February 13. Worship in the Meetingroom will begin at 5:15 p.m. Excerpts from the film Play in the Cemetery will be shown at 6 p.m., followed by the dinner. Desserts will be provided by Meeting Friends.

New York Yearly Meeting Issues Apology to Afro-Descendants

At November's Yearly Meeting Fall Sessions, with several members of Brooklyn Meeting in attendance, NYYM approved adopting and issuing an Apology to Afro-Descendants. (Afro-Descendant is the United Nations' term for people descended from the African diaspora.) The Apology was originally requested by an African-American Friend and the present wording grew from a version written by European-American Quakers Working to End Racism. The Apology was first published in Spark in January 2008 and has since been revised several times by the Task Group on Racism under the Ministry Coordinating Committee. The Apology condemns the institution of slavery, the participation of individual Quakers in it, and later unjust practices of segregation. This resulted in many individuals being enriched, directly or indirectly, by institutional racism. The Apology calls upon today's Quakers to renew our commitment to the testimony of equality as regards Afro-Descendants, and to work to bring about justice and reconciliation.

Andy von Salis, who acted as the Recording Clerk for Yearly Meeting, described the process of reaching unity as "intense, but ultimately faithful." Friends expressed approval for the need for an apology but there was initial disunity as to whether it was the Yearly Meeting's place to apologize, or whether the apology was sufficient. Other Friends asked, "Why is it so hard to say, that you are hurting and I am sorry?" In the end, the Apology was adopted. Friends are invited to read the Apology, which can be found as indented text in the body of the November 17 minutes of the Fall Sessions:

My Journey

Many meetinghouses around the country have been dealing with the issue of declining attendance, but Brooklyn Monthly Meeting continues to grow while remaining a strong and vibrant community. But why? What has drawn people to Brooklyn Meeting, and what is it that keeps them coming back? "My Journey" represents an attempt to answer this question, as each month a different member or attender will explain the personal circumstances that led him or her to Brooklyn Meeting.

I first attended Brooklyn Meeting in 2009, because I missed the community I belonged to growing up at Powell House. I kept coming back because of the amazingly diverse and supportive community I found here. Some things that I think are special about Brooklyn Meeting are the Young Adult Friends group, the vibrant social hour, and the sheer amount of people sitting in silence, looking for inner light at the same time. I have also found the community to go above and beyond in terms of providing support to its members and attenders during tough times (I have been one such attender, overwhelmed by the love I felt from people I knew well as well as those who I had never spoken to). All of these things are important and have made going to meeting an enjoyable and meaningful experience. But the number one reason I am part of this community is because of its openness and acceptance of all.

I will never forget when I first learned that a "non-theist Quaker" was an actual thing, at a membership letter-writing potluck in 2011. I had already been attending the Brooklyn Meeting for two years, drawn by the unconditional belief that there is "the light," or "love," in every person. This belief -- which guides Quaker convictions of nonviolence, equality, social justice and simplicity -- is what I try to bring to every decision I make. This belief has also reliably given me the most comfort as I proceed through life. However, the more regularly I attended Brooklyn Meeting, the more the atheist voice in my head began to question my intentions. Why was I attending Quaker meeting, and often referring to myself as a Quaker? Could I be both Quaker and atheist? I thought so, but did not know if people in the community would be offended by this idea. I was curious as to whether my Atheism was a "deal breaker" in Quakerism, but I never asked because I was afraid that the answer might be yes. When I heard someone use the terms "non-theist" and "Quaker" in the same sentence it was as if my whole being let out a sigh of relief. It was then explained to me that while this is not the case for all Quaker meetings, Brooklyn Meeting accepts non-theist Quakers as members. This is due to a general spirit of acceptance and a feeling that diversity in the community enriches everyone's experience of the light. Being part of a community that accepts you as you are and is open to discussing and examining our different pathways to the light has been a very warm and joyful experience.

The Brooklyn Meeting's all-inclusive spirit is not unique, but I have felt it more strongly here than at other meetings. Knowing how diverse our community is makes the belief of the light in every person more significant and meaningful. While I attended New Paltz Meeting for several years when I was a little kid, and Powell House regularly in the 5th-12th grades, it was only through Brooklyn Meeting that I was able to feel fully accepted and at home as a Quaker.

Recent Additions to the Meeting Library

Whether new to Quakerism or a life-long member, the Brooklyn Meeting Library offers literary selections designed to educate, provoke thought, and inspire debate. What follows is a recent selection, courtesy of Library Committee Clerk Angus McKillick.

Seeking Truth Together: Enabling the Poor and Saving the Planet in the Manner of Friends by Jack Powelson

This book was written in order to help Quakers deal with issues of real concern to compassionate people, such as affirmative action, the environment, affordable housing, debt forgiveness, foreign sweatshops, inner-city schools, globalization, greedy capitalists, CEO salaries and the growing gap between rich and poor. Jack Powelson is a sometimes controversial Quaker economist with experience in nineteen Latin American countries, sixteen

African countries, China and the Philippines.

Quotation Corner

“Our life is love, and peace, and tenderness; and bearing one with another, and forgiving one another, and not laying accusations one against another; but praying for another, and helping one another up with a tender hand.”
